STARVATION IS NEAR

Bread Supply Will Be Exhausted in Two Days And Transportation Is Tied Up—Troops May Operate Railroads.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] London, Aug. 16.—The strike fever in Great Britain showed little abatement today. Improved conditions at some points were offset by outbreaks elsewhere. At Liverpool, where teams were busy removing goods to bulwarks houses, they were untroubled.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] City of Mexico, Aug. 16.—Another important turn will be given to the Mexican presidential campaign by the convention called to meet today at Monterey, which it is expected will nominate Gen. Bernardo Reyes to succeed Diaz. Gen. Reyes, who is regarded by many persons as the strongest man in Mexico today and the one best fitted to solve the vital problems now facing the republic, has repeatedly stated since his return from his exile in Europe that he would not become a candidate for the presidency if by so doing he would embroil the country in civil discord.

Later, however, he has manifested a disposition to listen to the appeals of his friends and it is generally believed he will accept the nomination and contest for the presidency against Madero and Gomez. General Reyes will have the united support of the Clerical party.

CHECKS ARE SENT TO STATE EDITORS

State Treasurer Dahl Is Preparing Checks of $100 to Various Editors Who Published State Laws.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Madison, Wis., Aug. 16.—State Treasurer A. H. Dahl has commenced to sign and send out over 500 checks for $100 each to editors throughout the state who have issued the session laws to their subscribers. Last year $52,200 was disbursed to newspaper publishers for this purpose. The law grants each newspaper in the state which sends the session laws to its subscribers $100, and few papers have foregone the opportunity. The laws are purchased from a publishing house for a few dollars, in most cases, and the publisher's profit is in the neighborhood of $90. To many country editors the check is considered a godsend. An attempt at one session to repeal the law found favor for reasons obvious to all.

EDGERTON COUNCIL TAKES IMPORTANT ACTION ON STREETS

City Engineer Presented Plans For Grading Road and Walk on East Fulton Street—Repairs Ordered—Other Edgerton News.

(Special to the Gazette.)

Edgerton, Aug. 16.—Last night was the regular meeting of the common council and in the absence of Mayor Council, President Dallman presided. The city engineer presented profiles of grades and elevations of road and walk on Fulton street, from Broadway to Chilton, and the council ordered it filled. This looks as if the hill on East Fulton street might be cut down and the greatly needed walk built there. East Fulton street has more travel over the sidewalk than any other walk in the city and many of the taxpayers think they are entitled to a good cement walk in place of the board one.

Mart Williams, for some time porter at the Carlton hotel, was granted a pool table license in the rear of Phil Jones' barber shop.

The council ordered the street commissioner to gravel main street and Stoughton road. These streets are greatly in need of work of some kind.

The ladies of the W. R. C. held their annual picnic and outing yesterday at the Seaside cottage on the banks of Rock river. Besides enjoying a big dinner and good time generally, much time was devoted to picnicking, but nothing of any value was found. Nearly thirty members were present.

Returning from a family reunion at Brodhead yesterday, Joe Horn of McFarland, Wis., stopped into a local saloon to get a few drinks while waiting for the train to take him home and subsequently was turned over to the police, the conductor of the train refusing to carry the man because he was intoxicated. A fine of $2 and costs or $3 was fixed by the court. Horn promised to send the money and as there seemed to be no doubt that the man would keep his word, the court adjourned the case for one week.

William Tobin had to "foot it" to the country, after being arraigned this morning, to secure money to pay the penalty for a "spree" indulged in while he was in the city. The court fixed the fine at $2 and costs, or $1.

James ("Jimbo") Clarke is serving an eight day sentence at the county jail for drunkenness, he being another of the sextette arraigned this morning for drunkenness. A fine of $1 and costs was the penalty fixed by the court.

A similar sentence was given Ed. Waldrath for the same offense. Fred Brennan went to jail for five days in default of payment of a fine of $2 and costs.

Favorable Weather, An Enthusiastic Crowd and An Interesting Program Marks the Event As One To Be Remembered.

Local members of the Ancient Order of Hibernians and others who attended the picnic at Crystal Springs yesterday are unanimous in declaring that the picnic was a grand success.

The weather was ideal and the crowd in attendance numbering about three hundred and delighted with the entertainment given. Although the two speakers from out of town, who were on the program failed to appear there was no need to search long for a person, who was capable of giving the address of the day. Dean Reilly filled this number on the program with great success although it was necessary for him to make an impromptu speech.

After the address was given the field sports were begun and these afforded the visitors much amusement until late in the afternoon.

The Irish jig and reel dancing by Misses Ethel Neale and Loretta Mitchell of Milwaukee was the most pleasing number on the program. Their performance called forth much enthusiastic comment from the visitors and several encore were called for by the crowd.

The dancing in the evening a short time before the crowd began to break up and return to the city.

Rev. Father Mahoney of Milwaukee, Dean and Father Reilly of this city were guests of honor at the picnic.

Dancing was engaged in during the late afternoon and until the close of the entertainment about 9:30.

Trainmen Subject To Discharge If They Wash Before Entering Terminal.

An order recently issued by the officials of the Northwestern road relative to the sprinkling down of the ash boxes and leaving the engine in proper condition when turned over at the terminal recalls to mind an order issued by the officials of the Hariman system concerning the conduct of the engineers and firemen upon arriving at the end of their runs.

By the terms of this order which applies to the train and engine men on the Southern Pacific such employees are not permitted to wash their hands or faces until after their train is in.

Should they come into the terminal with clean hands and faces this fact is to be taken as evidence that they neglected their duties and they are liable to discharge.

This order is rather novel and may be looked upon as unnecessary, but it is a step toward the prevention of wrecks. A careful study of wrecks which have occurred on that system shows that a majority occurred in the yards or near the terminals of the divisions.

This led to the belief that as the trains approached the end of the run the crews relaxed vigilance. In many cases it was found that the men left their hands and faces so they could leave the yards at once after turning over their train at the terminal.

The recent bulletin posted at the shop gives a list of the assignments of engineers and firemen for the work in and from the gravel pit. They are as follows: Engineers H. H. Edman and J. W. Clark stopping at the pit, and Engineers E. Carman, A. C. Schulz, G. Bodah, and J. A. Watson hauling to the new line at Clyndon.

Firemen G. M. McCullough and A. Freeman are assigned to the spotting job and H. A. Ducker, B. Edwards, M. Nelson and A. Wiley on the hauling run.

Work was tied up there for a short time this morning due to the derailment of one of the trains. It has been found that the recent rains so softened the foundation for the tracks that the whole line in the pit must be carefully re-ballasted in order to insure safety for the loaded cars. A crew of track men is kept busy there now re-ballasting the track.

James Crowley and William Marisch were off duty last night.

Roy Goosher was added to the force today as dispatcher's helper.

E. Courtney is off duty on account of sickness.

Switchman Smith is relieving Switchman Behrendt, who went to Chicago today and while there will witness the aviation meet.

Dan Sullivan, engine inspector, is laying off today.

Switchman Garry is on duty with Clough on the half an hour run for the day.

The ditch digger, which has been in use in the vicinity of Caladonia, was brought to the shop today for repairs. One of the main rear shafts was broken and in addition to replacing this there will be other minor repairs necessary.

Engineer Callahan left today on a month's vacation and his place on the down town switch engine is taken by Engineer Mead.

Engineer George Allen is off duty for about a week, relieved by Engineer Higgins.

Engineer Campbell and Fireman Brunson are relieving Kober and Enlish on the R. and S. W. passenger.

Engineer Barron and Fireman Vorpus resumed work on the R. and S. W. passenger run after a week's layoff.

THEATERS

"The Servant in the House."

An opportunity to witness a performance of the most widely discussed play of the century is offered when "The Servant in the House" with the unusually capable company of Henry Miller Associate Players comes to the Myers Theatre Monday, Sept. 4, matinee and evening. This is the play that was presented for two whole seasons in New York and is now being played in five European countries. It is the great and powerful drama by Charles Rann Kennedy which Harper's Magazine calls the "most remarkable play in the English language," which the New York Evening Post declares to be "the most beautiful play of all ages," and of which the New York Sun said:

"It is not lightly to be discussed; it really should not be discussed at all. It delivers its message on 34th street, just off Broadway—to talk to us if we will but listen; to win our tears and smiles, to shame our petty prejudices and aims, and to breathe on some of us again the silence of immortal hopes."

The company that will present this masterpiece here is the best ever gathered for such a production. Each player was selected with a regard to his and her ability suitable to the great drama.

BASEBALL NOTES

"Big George" McConnell, the Rochester pitcher, has won 22 out of 25 games he has pitched.

The Boston Red Sox have been badly crippled with Lewis, Wagner and Verbeke out of the game.

Nap Lajoie and his big bat are working in the same old way and keeping Cleveland on the baseball map.

Look out for Pittsburgh. The Pirates are coming to the front in the National League race at a fast clip.

The work of Cashion, Washington's young pitcher, looks like real ice. He comes from the Carolina Association.

Scott Fred Lake of the St. Louis Browns is trying to buy the Lynn franchise in the New England League.

The New York Giants fall down when they hit the road, but at home McGraw's hirelings are a hard outfit to beat.

Joe Cantillon must be given "Rube" Waddell the variant pocketbook treatment. "Rube" is pitching swimming ball for Minneapolis.

President Comiskey of the White Sox has signed "Flame" Delid, a California pitcher. Must be easy for a pitcher with that name to warm up.

In order to get a slant at Marty O'Toole, the $25,000 pitcher, American Association fans are flocking to the park when the St. Paul team performs.

New York was the only soft pick-up for the White Sox during the Eastern trip. The Chicago crew was badly scorched in Boston, Philadelphia and Washington.

With Dosh, Magee and Titus out of the game, the Philadelphia Nationals have been going fast like a one-cylinder motor over the Rocky Mountains.

Bill Dahlen's Brooklyn team made a swell showing on the western trip. With a little better break in the close ones Bill and his Dodgers would have made a clean-up.

The Detroit Tigers lost seven out of ten games played in Philadelphia and Boston, but took home a barrel of money. The total attendance for four days in each city was 186,000.

With The Soxers.

Matt Wells and Phil Brock will meet in Philadelphia Aug. 18.

Jack (Twin) Sullivan and George Cotton have signed to box in Buffalo the later part of the month.

Ed McCoy, who says he is a genuine "come back" will meet "Gunboat" Smith in San Francisco if some promoter will stage the bout.

Jimmy Clabby will make another trip to Australia under the management of Hugh McIntosh. He will leave for that country next month.

HARPER TO REPORT ON WATER SUPPLY

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Aug. 15.—A report on the condition of the water supply of Ashland, Wis., will be made at the end of this week by Dr. C. A. Harper, secretary of the state board of health, and E. J. Talley, chemist for the state hygiene laboratory, both of whom made examinations of the situation in that city last week. The report will probably cite bacterial filtration as one of the causes of the polluted water supply.

Ashland's water supply comes from Chequamegon bay, into which the sewage of Ashland, Washburn and Bayfield emptied. To get pure water from Lake Superior would require a twelve-mile conduit, which is impracticable. Sand filtration is now used and it is likely that a more thorough system of purification will be recommended.

Dr. Harper reports that the people of Wisconsin are unusually healthy, that few disease outbreaks now exist, and that doctors are having an easy time this summer.

TRADE FAVORITISM.

"No one familiar with the commercial and industrial history of this country for the past ten years can fail to find amusement in the congressional investigation of the United States Steel Corporation," says the Wall Street Journal. "Calling as witnesses some of the most important men in the country, it has failed to elicit one single fact which was not matter of common knowledge, or readily accessible to anybody who wanted to know. The reason is that there was nothing to conceal; but we suppose that appears to reason in this connection are beside the mark."

"One fact disclosed by the commission, well enough known by anybody who cared to inquire, was that the Standard Oil Corporation secured a 5% rebate on the steel pipes it bought, which discount has not so far been allowed to have been extended to other buyers. Let it be understood that the Steel Corporation is a manufacturing company, and only so far as its own railroad property is concerned is it governed by the laws applying to railroads in the matter of rebates. Those laws do not apply in the matter of trade discounts, which is the more accurate term, and could never be made to apply effectively by any conceivable legislation."

"But if the position of the Standard Oil Co., through its representatives and allies on the board of the Steel Corporation, secured for it an unfair advantage over its competitors, one which its irreproachable credit and the magnitude of its business did not equitably demand, then the matter becomes serious. It would be impossible to preserve anything of the kind. The Standard Oil Co. would plead that its business was exclusively worth having, being that of a safe customer who paid his bills promptly, and that it was worth the while of the Steel Corporation to make concessions to secure it."

"The plea is good in morals and in law, and it indicates a condition governing the marketing of all products everywhere, except where government monopolies exist. And yet, underneath there is the disquieting implication of unfairness and of unjust advantage secured by great wealth and power, which is the something tangible underlying all the complaints against the 'trusts,' so called. The attack upon capital has been largely the outcome of ignorance, intolerance, unscrupulous ambition, and the envy which is always latent in the minds of the unsuccessful, whatever the cause of their failure. Allowing all this, the implication that the large capitalists have not played fair is broadly prevalent, and represents a problem calculated to try our highest statesmanship."

"We are young yet, badly governed by our own selves, and we do not know the limitations of the gigantic powers we exercise with such reckless prodigality. At least one limitation which we should have learned by this time is this: That we cannot legislate the Golden Rule into the statute book."

MAKING IT PAY.

"However slow congress may be in squarely facing important issues arising from relatively near completion of the Panama canal, Postmaster General Hitchcock is alert," says an exchange.

"Under authority of recent legislation, he has issued an order making tentative plans for a fast ocean mail service between New York and New Orleans and Colon and between Seattle and San Francisco and Panama. Ships seeking the business must make sixteen knots, sail weekly and naturally be of dimensions adequate to carry freight. So that, in addition to facilitating interchange of such matter as is entrusted to the mails, this subsidized government service will share in increased commerce between the two Americas."

"Mr. Hitchcock requires that the service begin in the autumn of 1914. That gives abundant time for construction of new craft, if Americans decide to get their share of the new business which is coming to transportation companies that will traffic through the new waterway. British, German and Japanese firms, competing for a world's carrying trade, are alive to the fundamental changes involved with the new route. The rival hand route at Tehuantepec is preparing to meet the competition with lowered charges. In distant Suez that historic ditch is being newly equipped and widened in order to hold and do as much business as possible. Great American corporations have their agents at Panama and Washington sizing up the situation and shaping events as far as possible so that they may profit."

"Meanwhile, the American people and congress appear as if somewhat, seemingly unaware of the important decisions as to administration for which a world of shipmasters and owners are waiting and upon which depends the pecuniary success of the canal. How are the rates to compare with those of the Suez? Who is to administer the canal, a hydra-headed commission or a single man with full power and responsible only to congress? What is to be done with the army of present employees when the canal is completed? Are they to be retained as operators of it and of allied governmental works? Who is to control the coaling and provisioning of vessels and profit by all the business that vessels must do at Panama or Colon? Uncle Sam, or private investors and capitalists, charging what they please and taking all the profits? Such are some of the important questions demanding prompt answer. If the canal is to be operated on lines of efficiency and remuneration to the government. For Colonel Goethals, who is winning permanent renown by constructing the canal, is insistent that if governmentally operated on a broad scale, including coaling, repairs and provisioning of ships as well as collecting tolls, the water route can be made to earn for its owners much of its original cost. He would have Uncle Sam share in the zone all competitors and gather in all the 'side' as well as direct profits. Will congress and the people be equally prudent and thrifty?"

FALLING IN LINE.

Papers throughout the country, whether pro Taft or not, are falling in line as regards his policy of veto of the tariff measures that have been passed by the present congress. In commenting upon the situation, and particularly the attitude of the Chicago Tribune, an exchange says of the situation that, having felt the pulse of the republican central west on those maddening tariff revision bills for politics only, and discovered that indications of opinion are some three to one in favor of waiting for the tariff commission report at the next regular session, the Chicago Tribune commendably falls in line.

"The case is so clear logically for the president's position that it is hard to see why any one should wait, before indulging it, to see which way the cat of public sentiment is going to jump."

Everybody knows that the republicanism of the central west strongly favors a tariff commission.

If that means anything worth mentioning, it surely means that the republicanism of the central west wants these schedules revised on the tariff commission plan, now that at last we have such a commission and it is nearly ready with its report.

To clinch the case it is known that President Taft wants these schedules revised promptly, calls the most objections of them "intolerable," and only contends that since we have a tariff commission we might as well take advantage of its nearly completed work."

These hurriedly tinkered up, put-the-president-in-a-hole tariff bills have not a leg of reason or public expediency to stand on. They are nothing but politics through and through, and the tariff commission was established to help take the tariff out of politics."

AVIATION.

Chicago is making a Roman holiday of their aviation meet. Thousands of interested persons swarm the lake front to enjoy the spectacle of the death-defying feats of the bird-men. Biplanes, monoplane, and aeroplanes dart higher and higher in the air and occasionally drop to the earth or into Lake Michigan, bringing death and destruction to the unfortunate aviators.

Still the sport continues. On Wednesday two men plunged to their death, still the heavier than air machines continued their flights, while the mangled remains of one aviator was tenderly carried to a hospital and the drowned corpse of the other was fished from the waters of the lake. A Roman holiday with thumbs down for the bird-men. No mercy shown—only to delight the public, as did the Gladiators of Rome when they faced wild beasts in the arena.

President Taft defied the senate and lower house at Washington by vetoing the statehood bill. His action was approved by the republican members of the two bodies, but was not pleasing to the democratic and near-democratic radicals. Taft was right, however, and had the courage of his convictions.

PRESS COMMENT.

Socialists Disappointed.

Wausau Record-Herald: An editor from Collier's has been going the rounds of the press predicting that the republican insurgents will home-stead a quarter section of the political commons and set up housekeeping for themselves. They may do it, but if they do it will be a bitter disappointment to the members of Victor Berger's party, who are regarding them with much longing and a considerable amount of kindness.

Their Kind is Few.

Marquette Eagle-Star: Anybody can give up. Anybody can become discouraged and let the lower lip drop. That it takes a man with grit to bend and turn and twist circumstances around to make them serve him and do his will. Formulate a plan, have a purpose, set a goal before your eyes, then work for your plan, stick to your purpose, and pull for your goal with all the power God has given you. That's the way to win.

Northwestern to Front.

Rockford Register-Gazette: The railroads in Michigan fought the two-cent rate in the upper peninsula, where they were formerly allowed to charge five cents. Their program was somewhat embarrassed, however, by the announcement by the Northwestern road that it would adhere to the two-cent rate. The Northwestern is one of the most important in the Lake Superior territory and its decision makes a precedent which the rest cannot conveniently ignore.

Any Old Way.

Green Bay Gazette: The idea that there could have been such a thing as a conspiracy among flunkeys to "do up" rival institutions back in 1907 seems to "ride" G. W. Perkins. Still the public distinctly remembers that when it comes to cornering food supplies, stocks or anything else and getting the best of either the public or other flunkeys, Wall Street barons have never been at all squeamish about gathering in the spoils or scrupulous as to the methods followed.

It's Too Uncertain.

Chicago Record-Herald: We like a close pennant race, but we wish the home team would get far enough ahead to enable us to go to bed feeling that there is no danger of a desirable bunch of bullies representing some other city coming into the lead within a week, at least.

Most Shocking.

Milwaukee Journal: A terrible thing has happened to the Four Hundred at Newport. An heiress has eloped with a chauffeur and married him. And what's worse, he's a healthy, clean, pure-blooded young fellow with no ancestry. It's terrible 'ow these shocking things happen.

The Wrong Appeal.

Rochester Times: June brides and prospective fall ones should take careful notice. A Chicago husband of a brief seven weeks tried to commit suicide because his wife kissed him too much. Good looking, girls, and neat looks are what keep a man after he is won.

Too Much Separation.

Fond du Lac Reporter: Uniformity in divorce laws appears to be the only real solution of the divorce evil, which has been increasing instead of decreasing annually. That national legislation will be needed to check the present condition of affairs appears a certainty.

It Actually "Is."

Baraboo News: It has been definitely and conclusively and finally proven that there is a steel trust. The modern investigating committee certainly runs across some odd facts.

PECULIAR CREATURE

WAS SEEN IN RIVER

NEAR MACHINE SHOP

Animal Resembling Fabled Sea Serpent Seen by Will Allen, Foreman at Rock River Machine Company's Plant, This Afternoon.

Was a prehistoric mammal resurrected or a variety of the fabled sea serpent that Will Allen, foreman of the machine shops of the Rock River Machine Company, saw shortly after dinner in the river at the rear of the company's plant on North Main street. Mr. Allen was working in the rear room of the plant sawing a bar, when, in glancing out of the rear door, he saw the animal, with just its head above water, swimming toward the east shore of the river. Leaving the machine for a minute he went outside and after gazing at it returned to the shop to get a bar to cut it, calling to some of the men to come with him. They refused to do so, but when he reached the platform at the rear of the plant a few minutes later the animal had evidently been frightened away, as there were no traces of it.

The creature is described as about six feet in length with a body from four to six inches in thickness and of a green color. Its head is banded like that of a snake, about six inches across, flat and thick and the head has the appearance of that of a snake. Along the back was a sharp ridge like that on the back of an alligator. It seemed to propel itself through the water by two peculiar shaped fins near the head and by wriggling its tail in the water. The body has no legs or other means of propulsion except the two fins.

Verification of Mr. Allen's story is given by A. A. Fink, superintendent of the Rock River Machine Company's plant, who last year saw a creature exactly like the one seen by Mr. Allen in the river near the machine plant.

WEATHER FORETOLD FOR COMING WEEK

Poster Gives Readers Idea What to Expect in Shape of Disturbances.

Last bulletin gave forecasts of disturbances to cross central August 20 to 24, warm wave 18 to 23, cool wave 22 to 25. This will be a high temperature storm, followed by a great drop in temperatures and at least light frosts in northern sections; not much rain but storm force will be of increasing intensity.

Next disturbance will reach Pacific slope about August 24, great central valleys 27, eastern sections 28. Cool wave will cross Pacific slope about August 27, great central valleys 29, eastern sections 31.

The storm forces of this disturbance will be greater than usual, temperature will average lower than usual but together will be on the upgrade. Not much rain. Drought complaint will come from many sections; too dry for corn, too dry for plowing for wheat, too dry for fall pastures. But I expect October rains to put the soil in better condition for sowing wheat.

Winter wheat is now the big question confronting farmers. They will know that plenty of moisture for fall sowing and good snows in cold climates to protect the wheat from the bad effects of freezing and thawing and then a moderate amount of moisture in April, May and June are important factors in making good wheat crop. If farmers know that these factors are to be received not much winter wheat would be sown.

At this time I have no idea what the 1912 conditions will do for winter wheat but I have several clerks working on that problem and hope soon to develop what the records of many years past have to say about it. The records say that in the New England States and the States near the Atlantic and Gulf of Mexico and near the Mississippi River from St. Louis to Dubuque the soil will be too dry during September for sowing winter grain. In all other winter grain sections the conditions in September seem favorable but many farmers will hesitate to sow winter grain in September on account of damage by insects. September promises to be very warm and therefore an insect breeder.

I will further discuss the fall sowing problem in next bulletin and will take it for granted that not much wheat will be put in the ground in September. On account of the great damages this year to corn and oats, farmers will probably be disposed to put in a much larger wheat crop than usual. At this time I can not say whether that will be best. In this and next bulletin I will discuss only the fall conditions for sowing winter grain.

The spring wheat country has quite a different problem to deal with. If the soil is covered with snow before it freezes deeply, in the spring, will go into the soil giving the spring wheat a favorable start and will go far toward insuring a good crop. But if the soil freezes deeply before the snow comes the water from the melting snow in the spring will not enter the soil and spring wheat will then be confronted with bad conditions to start with. I can not now discuss 1912 spring wheat conditions.

CATTLE GO HIGHER; HOG MARKET STEADY

Advance of 10 to 15 Cents for Better Grades of Bees at Chicago Market—Hogs Resume Steady Tone.

Chicago, Aug. 16.—With a doubling of the receipts of cattle and more than twice the number of hogs coming into the Chicago live stock market today, cattle prices went higher and hogs resumed a steady tone with slight advances for the better offerings.

For the better grades of beefs advances in prices were noted as high as fifteen cents per hundred, while canners had a tendency to raise about five cents. The top of the market remained at $8.00 with few offerings at that price. Receipts totaled 14,000.

Prices of all grades brought prices slightly in advance of yesterday's market and there was no appearance of a fall. The market was steady and the demand good taking the 20,000 head offered today without hesitation. Sheep market went with 38,000 offered.

Curious Bits of History.
A Tulip Craze.
By A. W. MACY.

The world saw something new under the sun in the seventeenth century. In the way of a tulip craze, it began in Holland, and spread all over Europe. There was a marvelous demand for the bulbs, and intense rivalry in producing new varieties. Rare ones sold at fabulous prices. One man is said to have paid $5,200 for a single bulb. Sometimes the ownership of a bulb was divided into shares. People simply went wild on the subject of tulips. Bulbs were often bartered for before they came into existence, and many were sold that never did exist. Men gambled in tulips somewhat as they now speculate in wheat. Whole fortunes were invested in the plants, and many wealthy families were financially ruined by the craze.

Dennington Anniversary Observed.

NEGRO MERCHANTS
IN LITTLE ROCK

Successful Members of Colored Race in Business and Other Activities Assembled Today.

Special to the Gazette.
Little Rock, Ark., Aug. 16.—Between seven and eight hundred delegates, among whom are scores of colored men who have made a success in commercial enterprises and others who represent prosperous towns controlled entirely by negroes, are attending the twelfth annual meeting of the National Negro Business League, which was opened in this city today. Booker T. Washington is the president of the league, the object of which is to inform the world of the progress the negro is making in business and to stimulate local business enterprises among the members of the race. The present meeting will continue its sessions until Saturday. The progress being made by the negroes in Oklahoma has induced the officers of the league to set aside tomorrow morning as Oklahoma Day, when delegates from that State will tell of the growth and prosperity of the town of Haley, which is inhabited and controlled entirely by negroes. One of the evidences of the town's prosperity is found in the fact that it has just installed a $25,000 light and power plant.

A Tulip Craze.
By A. W. MACY.

The world saw something new under the sun in the seventeenth century. In the way of a tulip craze, it began in Holland, and spread all over Europe. There was a marvelous demand for the bulbs, and intense rivalry in producing new varieties. Rare ones sold at fabulous prices. One man is said to have paid $5,200 for a single bulb. Sometimes the ownership of a bulb was divided into shares. People simply went wild on the subject of tulips. Bulbs were often bartered for before they came into existence, and many were sold that never did exist. Men gambled in tulips somewhat as they now speculate in wheat. Whole fortunes were invested in the plants, and many wealthy families were financially ruined by the craze.

NEGRO MERCHANTS IN LITTLE ROCK

Successful Members of Colored Race in Business and Other Activities Assembled Today.

Special to the Gazette.
Little Rock, Ark., Aug. 16.—Between seven and eight hundred delegates, among whom are scores of colored men who have made a success in commercial enterprises and others who represent prosperous towns controlled entirely by negroes, are attending the twelfth annual meeting of the National Negro Business League, which was opened in this city today. Booker T. Washington is the president of the league, the object of which is to inform the world of the progress the negro is making in business and to stimulate local business enterprises among the members of the race. The present meeting will continue its sessions until Saturday. The progress being made by the negroes in Oklahoma has induced the officers of the league to set aside tomorrow morning as Oklahoma Day, when delegates from that State will tell of the growth and prosperity of the town of Haley, which is inhabited and controlled entirely by negroes. One of the evidences of the town's prosperity is found in the fact that it has just installed a $25,000 light and power plant.

Convention of County Officers.
Mason City and Clear Lake. A wide audience, treasurers and supervisors of town to the number of eight hundred gathered here today for the annual meeting of their respective State associations. The sessions will last three days and will be divided between Mason City and Clear Lake. A wide range of subjects relating to the duties of the county officers will be discussed.

Dennington Anniversary Observed.
Montpelier, Vt., Aug. 16.—The 130th anniversary of the Battle of Dennington, in which the New Hampshire militia under General Stark defeated the British and which historians regard as the turning point of the Revolutionary war, was observed as a local holiday throughout Vermont today as usual.

Mrs. St. Croix Johnson, wife of the famous aviator. The picture was taken just after the search for the body of her husband had been abandoned. The news was, however, kept from her as it was feared that the shock might be greater than she could stand. Instead of the facts she is being told that her husband is all right and has just been taken to the hotel.

Thought for Today

NORMAL CHILDREN.

NO AMOUNT of watchfulness can make children's clothing measure the difference in degree of temperature to which they are exposed in our varying climate; yet we mothers often worry ourselves—if not the children—in the attempt. On warm days, we are sure they must be getting overheated. If, before we call them in we run with them long enough to start the free perspiration, we find what a relief it is from the heat. In cold weather we are certain they are getting chilled. But if we force them into extra coats and sweaters we join in their game, we find the warmth from within is quite enough.

I am sorry for neglected children, but I sometimes wonder if they are not more fortunate than the children who are never left a moment alone, who must dress, eat, play, and live by the standards of grown-ups, who are often below the children's par in vitality.

A certain amount of hardening is the foundation of permanent health. Children living in slums may keep well and survive the most unhealthy surroundings, while those in the best environment may be ill and die. This is not an argument for bad conditions, but it has its lesson. Health cannot be preserved by care alone. The prize-fighter, the football-player prepare by training to withstand strains and blows that would cause instant death under ordinary circumstances.

If we would have our children possess abundant vitality, we must not be too narrowly cautious. This does not mean we should be neglectful. A means we should have faith in the normal. When care does not stop with a thousand and one little details we mothers are eager to look after. It includes the building up of the constitution, and its preparation for life's inevitable strain and hardship.

The Evening Chit-Chat

by RUTH CAMERON.

"SOCRATES thought that if all our misfortunes were laid in one common heap whence everyone must take an equal portion, most persons would be content to take their own and depart."—Plutarch.

"It is a beautiful day for driving," I commented to the stable man the other morning.

He looked up from the traces he was fastening and out of the dingy stable into the world of sunshine and almost blinked.

"It is that, ma'am," he said wistfully, "and we've had a lot of them lately."

"Do you go out much?" I asked.

The wistfulness suddenly changed into bitterness. "No, ma'am, not at all, as he answered, 'Do I go out much? No, not at all, from half past five in the morning when I have to get here to feed the horses until seven at night when I take the car home. All I see of the beautiful day is the dawn and the dusk. The most of the time I'm down there—' pointing with his thumb to the basement of the stable, 'cleaning and feeding the horses, and then, maybe, up here for a few minutes to harness or to eat my lunch. Beautiful days and bad ones, they're all the same to me."

"Why ma'am I've five children and the two youngest I've scarcely ever seen. Of course, they aren't before I go and before I get home they're bed. Holidays? I don't have any. I have to go to work on every day Sunday and holidays just the same as any other day. Beautiful days and bad ones, they're all the same to me."

No, ma'am, it's three hundred and sixty-five days in the year for me."

The bitterness died out of his face as suddenly as it came. A sense of the futility of revolt seemed to have taken its place.

"Yes ma'am," he said, as he handed me the reins, "it is a wonderfully fine day for driving."

The stable man was very pale with the pallor of those who do not have enough sunlight—a pallor that suggests the sickliness of collar-necked plants. His shoulders stooped. A heavy shawl of neglected beard covered his face. His eyes were sunken. He sent me out into the beautiful day with a shadow on my heart that the sunshine could not chase away.

For the times when you are inclined to be discontented with your share of the world's happiness—

For the days when you think that if you tried the experiment Socrates suggests you would prefer an equal portion of the whole to your own misfortune—I have told you this dismal little story.

When these days come, please think of this man and be ashamed of your discontent.

Just think what his life is—or, rather, his existence—I can't see that he has any life. No Sundays to live through the week for, no holidays to look forward to—nothing.

Why does he endure such a condition—you wonder, perhaps. Well, I suppose for five good reasons, five hungry little reasons that have to be clothed and fed and sent to school. And if he complains too much, doubtless there would be another man eager for the position.

Of course, the thought of him can't cast such a dismal shadow over your heart as it did over mine, because you didn't see him.

I don't think I'd tell you if I could.

I only want to cast enough shadow to make you realize, by contrast, how bright your own life is.

Have I done that?

The woman doing fancy work nodded. "I've been there," she said.

"I would certainly like," said the Candid Girl, "to ask salesgirls to finish their nails in the morning before they come to business. It makes you think of a manure establishment to go into a business store when it has just opened. Nearly every girl behind the counters is attending to her hands."

"And the sales people look so indignant, if you ask them to please hurry and wait on you," said the woman doing fancy work.

"I would like to ask them, too," went on the Candid Girl, "if they couldn't finish the story of 'What he said and what I said,' after they had waited on me, quite as well as before. Of course, I know it is terribly interesting, but then it really adds to the thrills to have it continued in our next."

"Then, I would like to suggest," continued the Candid Girl mildly, "that I think I know what I want, and that when I ask for a blue suit, I don't care to have the sales girl look me up and down and say, 'You wouldn't look well in that,' and go off and bring me a brown."

The woman who was doing fancy work smiled sympathetically.

"Oh, the times I have been diplomatically told what I wanted," she said.

"And if I could abolish the mythical 'They,' that sales people fling at you, I think I would be achieving a reform quite as noteworthy as some of the famous reforms of history. You ask for low heels, and you are told 'They' are not wearing low heels. You ask for a hat, and you are told, 'They' are not wearing hats, but marquette. You ask for a certain kind of hat, and the inevitable chant, 'They' are not wearing, greets you."

"Then, I would like to call their attention to the gentle art of listening. I have had sales people, who didn't appear to be deaf, send things to me, Chester instead of to New York. The two names do not sound alike to me. There are others who when you ask for imported cattle soap hand you out a brand made in Chicago, and others to whom 'Chester' makes a sound like 'C. O. D.'—but why go on?"

"Sales people no doubt have their trials," concluded the Candid Girl.

"But shoppers have their trials also. And I don't think it would do any harm once in a while to present the shoppers' side of the case. I think their lot at times is quite as hard as that of the sales person, and that they are quite as much in need of sympathy. A Society for the Relief of the Sufferings of Shoppers might not be at all unwise."

"I would join it for one," said the woman who was doing fancy work.

"and I think it would have a large membership."

The KITCHEN GABINET

W H O would long for pencil and paper. Wealth of grape the hills adorning. With the cherries, they are rare. With their grapes to the morning. Crisp cherries everywhere.

SOME FROZEN DISHES.

There are no desserts that are so universally liked as the frozen ones. Here are a few to try:

Raspberry Water Ice.—Take one and a half pints of raspberries, one orange, one lemon and a pound of sugar cooked with two cups of water for ten minutes. Add the grated rind of the lemon and orange and let it remain in the syrup until quite cold, then add the raspberries, also the strained orange and lemon juice. Freeze until firm.

Ginger Bombe.—Prepare a custard with a cupful of milk, three tablespoonfuls of sugar and the rind of a lemon. When the milk boils, pour it over the yolks of four eggs and a tablespoonful of ground ginger, stir until it thickens, add the juice of a lemon and freeze. Add a cup of whipped cream and line the mould with preserved ginger, cut in pieces.

Peach Ice Cream.—Take a quart of cream, add three-quarters of a pound of sugar, one quart of ripe peaches, half a teaspoonful of almond extract. Put half of the cream on to scald, add the sugar, then take from the fire and add the remaining cream; when cold freeze. The peaches are pared and mashed and then put through a sieve with a teaspoonful of almond extract and add to the frozen cream, stir for a few minutes, then let stand to ripen.

Strawberry Ice Cream.—There is no more delicious dessert than a strawberry ice cream if carefully strained to remove the seeds. Crush a quart of berries and sweeten with a cup of sugar, strain the juice and pulp through a sieve, then through a cloth, add a pint of cream and freeze. A tablespoonful of lemon juice adds to its palatability as well as making it of a deeper color.

Banana Ice Cream.—Peel and put through a sieve six bananas. Make a custard and add the bananas when it is cool; add a tablespoonful each of lemon and orange juice. Stir in a half cupful of cream, and freeze.

TALK TO HOUSE-KEEPERS

(By Nellie L. Horn.)

"He doeth well who doeth his best."

At this time of the year just between the two house cleaning seasons, it is especially hard to keep the house looking fresh and clean. Dust, flies and spiders are a source of constant trouble to all housewives, and while these three pests will probably never be eliminated in our day, at least, there are ways of making the warfare against them less arduous. At least every two weeks on sweeping day after the carpets or rugs have been thoroughly swept, give them with a cloth dipped in ammonia water. This will take up any remaining surface dust, and will freshen the colors wonderfully. Between times, unless the room has hard usage, a carpet sweeper will keep floor coverings clean. First remove the brush from the sweeper and hold under the faucet or dip it in water; shake off all surplus water, replace it, and you will find that the work is done much more satisfactorily and more dustlessly. If you have not a loaded brush for the polished borders, make a large bag for your broom of flannel or soft old underwear, moisten it slightly with any dusting fluid, and the work of keeping dust and lint off the bare floors will be lessened perceptibly.

The chumbers should be wiped at least once a week with a soft cloth dipped in kerosene. This not only cleans them but effectively keeps off the flies.

Photographs may safely be cleaned by gently wiping them with a cloth moistened with lukewarm water and ammonia, drying them at once with a soft dry cloth.

Alcohol does an easy and effective cleaner for piano keys or ivory fretwork.

The labelling of ruit cans always a tedious task, may be greatly facilitated by using a sheet of gummed paper, the size of the desired label, the name of the contents and any information regarding it written thereon, and pasted on the can as easily as a postage stamp. A large sheet, which costs ten cents, with label cutters, makes a very convenient and successful label.

When clothes are to be ironed in a hurry, put boiling water in the iron, sprinkle them and roll them down, and by the time you have finished the last piece, the first piece will be ready to iron.

Now that apples are in season, and the appetizing apple salad is again in evidence, many housekeepers are undergoing the disappointing and provoking experience of having the fruit discolor. To avoid this, pour lemon juice over the apples as soon as they are cut; this not only lessens their color but also improves their flavor, blending delightfully with the salad dressing.

When making custards, the yolks of the eggs are often curdled when they are added to the boiling milk.

Put Them Up in Parks.

"Mother," said a small boy I know, "do you know what they do with presidents when they get through with them?" "No," I replied, "I don't."

"They freeze them stiff and put them up in parks," he replied.

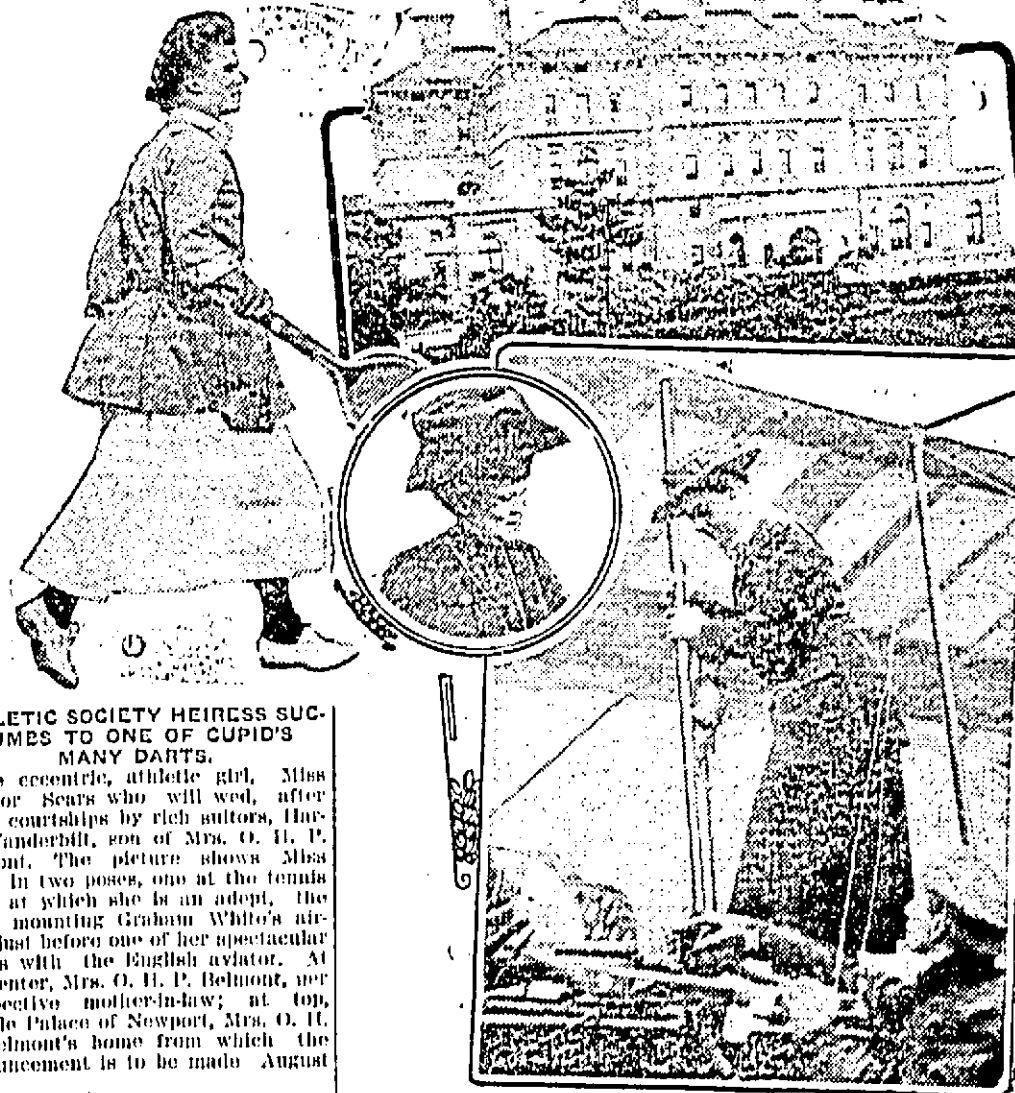

Friends Seized Opportunity.

"How did it happen that your friends got the best of you?" queried the inquisitive person. "They got busy while I was watching my enemies," explained the man who had got the short end of it.

are added to the boiling milk. This may be prevented if one tablespoon of sweet milk for each egg used is added to and mixed with the beaten yolks before stirring them into the boiling milk.

DOTTED PONGEE.

One of the prettiest pattern dresses seen this year is pongee in natural tone dotted in emerald green. The design is shown above and the embroidery used for trimming is done on pongee in same shade of green as dots. Green velvet makes the skirt, which finishes in a large bow at back with long ends. The design is simple but decidedly chic.

The Mexican children are delightfully interesting. Courtesy with them seems to be ingrained. As soon as they can talk they become Chester-fords, while their innate kindness prompts them to many a delicate attention.

DIET UNDERLIES ALL LIFE PROBLEMS.

When Bishop Fallows said: "You can make a man good or bad according to the way you feed him," he was not denying the importance of the condition of the heart, but emphasizing the importance of the state of the stomach. Likewise Henry Ward Beecher when he said a man with a poor liver couldn't be a good Christian.

It is worth while emphasizing also the statement of Dr. Alexander Haig, an eminent English authority, in the preface to his well-known work, "Food and Diet."

"Diet, as at present used, is the product of a vast amount of ignorance. It is the cause of a hideous waste of time and money. It produces mental and moral obliquities . . . destroys health and shortens life. The building of brain cells, and, therefore, of mind-stuff . . . lies at the root of all the problems of life."

It is unquestionably true that simplicity in diet, with the minimum of variety giving all the elements of nutrition, far surpasses the customary much mixed dietary.

SHE SUFFERED FIVE YEARS

Finally Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Erle, Pa.—"I suffered for five years from female troubles and at last was almost helpless. I went to three doctors and they did me no good, so my sister advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and when I had taken only two bottles I could see a big change, so I took six bottles and I am now strong and well again. I don't know how to express my thanks for the good it has done me and I hope all suffering women will give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It was worth its weight in gold."—Mrs. J. P. ENDLICH, R. F. D. No. 7, Erle, Pa.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and today holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials are on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., from women who have been cured from almost every form of female complaints, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration. Every suffering woman owes it to herself to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you want special advice write to Mrs. J. C. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for it. It is free and always helpful.

FLORENCE WICKS IN THE LIMELIGHT IN AN EASTERN COURT

HEN CLOPMENT WITH GEORGE O. FORD OF THIS CITY YEARS AGO REMEMBERED BY MANY.

BEGAN CAREER HERE

Later Secured a Divorce and Has Had Many Sensational Episodes Since Then.

Florence Lillian Wicks, former resident of Janesville, is again in the limelight. Since she began her career in Janesville in the early nineties, by eloping with George Ford, whom she later divorced, the fair Florence Lillian has been a true adventuress.

Many residents remember the elopement which created a sensation at the time, when Miss Wicks was a guest of the Misses Ford and ran away with her husband's brother and was quietly married before even the most intimate friends of the couple knew it was even a possibility.

The following is the tale of her latest adventure with the scene laid this time in the east where she and her mother, also a divorced woman, and younger sister have been making their home.

Claiming that Florence Lillian Wicks, daughter of the late William Wicks, a former president of the Pullman Car Company, a former actress, said to be still the wife of Gilbert Johnson of New York, an official of the American Tobacco Company, is merely his housekeeper and not a companion, as she alleges, W. H. Moore, a prominent young man of Atlantic City, has called upon the law to oust the beautiful woman from a handsome country place in Absecon, where they have been living for several months.

The former actress and her mother have barricaded the doors and windows of the residence and she threatens to kill Moore if he makes further attempts to get inside. Today the pair appeared before Judge Andrews of Absecon, where Miss Wicks had him jailed on the charge of assault and battery, which grew out of a visit he made at the house last night in an effort to get his clothes.

After hearing the testimony of such a character as to create a sensation among the fashionable residents of the pretty suburb, who flocked from the onlooking district to make up the audience, the magistrate held Moore under the nominal bail of $50 for his appearance before the October grand jury. The woman put up $25 as surety for her presence at the court as the prosecuting witness.

Affair Reaches Acute Stage.
The affair, which has been for weeks fermenting, reached an acute stage yesterday when Moore, who says he leased the place from Charles Mathis, a former councilman of this city, and holds the receipts as evidence, tried to put Miss Wicks, her mother, Mrs. Laura Wicks, and a younger sister, out of the house.

When they refused to comply he promptly had the water, gas and electric lights turned off, but this did not deter them in the least, as far as leaving the place was concerned. It did serve, however, to arouse the ire of Miss Wicks, and when Moore appeared and secured entrance to the house by a ruse, they engaged in a spit and mix-up that created a furor among the neighbors, who soon surrounded the house.

"They say they listened to rather sly conversation, considerably heated, that ended in a fight, in which Moore apparently got the worst end."

This morning Miss Wicks secured a warrant for his arrest. Speedily mentioned in the charge was the allegation that Moore had torn two blood pills from the complainant's beautiful head of blue. In defense he declared Miss Wicks had no use for blood pills.

Denies She's a Blotch.
"Her hair is naturally black. What use has any brunette for such colored adornment?" he asked. In the dim light of the courtroom an angry glow appeared on the countenance of Miss Wicks, which deepened when Moore said: "She appears to be a decided blotch, but I was with her when she decided."

When Moore asserted the woman was merely his housekeeper and that he had a perfect right by law to discharge her from the premises, Miss Wicks became real mad.

"He didn't have a shirt to his back when I took him in," she declared, and Moore did not rebut her contention. Moore has now the reputation of being the best dressed man in town.

The defendant claims he had offered to sell out the furnishings of the place, including a fine stocked stable, kennel and poultry yard, and divide the money between them. This Miss Wicks denied and claimed ownership of everything on the premises. She further asserted his testimony that she had tried to commit suicide in the Toms River about three years ago, from which he had saved her, was a fabrication, but used stronger terms.

"He's just trying to get rid of me, that's all," she almost shouted in Moore's contention to relate sensational information concerning her. The case was finally settled temporarily when bail was fixed. "Then Moore retailed by securing a writ to have Miss Wicks and her mother and sister removed from the residence. The notice to vacate had not been acknowledged up until late tonight and the women have gone into retirement behind barricaded doors.

Threatening for Information.
Little Gertrude, entering a butcher's shop for the first time, stood gazing around her in silent astonishment. Presently she took her mother by the hand, and, leading her to where hung a string of Bologna sausages, she put a tiny finger on one big sausage and gravely inquired: "Mamma, what was this when it was alive?"—Exchange.

MARS AND SATURN IN CONJUNCTION

Two Planets Will Appear in the Eastern Heavens As One at Eleven This Evening.

It is announced by weather bureau officials that an interesting phenomenon will be viewed in the heavens tonight when Jupiter and Saturn will be in conjunction.

At about 11 o'clock the stars will be visible in the east. To the eye the two planets will appear as a bright double star, the distance between them being but twenty-one minutes of an arc; that is, about two-thirds the apparent width of the moon. Mars will pass north of Saturn. The moon, which will be a trifle to the east, will be half full, and the picture should be an impressive one.

NOTES FOR CITY FARMERS ONLY.
(By H. L. RANN.)

There is no greater annoyance to a person of delicate sensibilities than the horse with a high pressure sneeze.

The horse which persists in blowing his nose in the open air, in the face of a stiff breeze, ought to be barred from polite society and have his nostrils plugged with absorbent cotton.

This is the only treatment that does any good. We have tried mouthfuls of liquid blue flowers and a striking appeal to the anti-man's pride with an elm club, but they were about as effective as tobacco sauce on the pink eye. If you have a gelding which seems a pocket handkerchief, clamp him to the corn plow and work him until he couldn't sneeze on a bet.

Something ought to be done to reduce the diet of the setting hen. At present her chief delicacies are grub worms and grit, and on a pinch she will line her stomach with coal slack and chipped glass. As a result, many a man who has called for eggs straight from the hen has found a broken lamp chimney, causing him to wait his compliments to the cook in her garage that would bleach the trousers down on the head wallows.

The hen ought to be fed out of a nose bag, and this will make every chicken on the place stand up and light his father to the ropes. The red cornucopia in the average hen which causes a precocious

Left-Handed Economy.
The average man is so content in his sleep, take him on your knees and unlace his shoes before driving him on an icy road of chuckholes. A sharpshod horse can let more air holes into his cuticle in an hour's drive over a rough country road than you can lap

CHAPTER II.

A CHANGE OF UNIFORM.

THE soldier followed her, leading his horse, till they came upon her own pony tied to a sapling. Mark offered to help her mount, but she was not used to such civility, and leading her horse to the trunk of a fallen tree mounted by herself.

Crossing the road, the two entered a wood on the other side. The girl kept a straight course till she came to a creek, which she forded below and near a log that had been felled across it to be used for a footbridge. On the farther side she struck an old road, abandoned, at least for wheels. Mark rode up alongside of her. She was a wild looking thing, with hardly a trace of civilization about her except her calico dress and cowhide shoes.

"Where are you taking me to?" asked Mark.

"Home."

"Where's home?"

"Toward the old Sequatchie river."

"How far is it to the river?"

"About a mile from the creek we just crossed."

"And how far from the river to your home?"

"About another mile. We live on a road ex runs from the Chattanooga pike to Anderson."

"That's well. I want to reach the pike."

"Well, I'll only have to go a couple of miles from our house to get there."

"You seem to know all about this country."

"Reckon I do. I was born here. I done a heap of hunting in these hazy woods. I toled a gun all over 'em."

"Tell me something about yourself. What's your name?"

"Souri."

"Souri what?"

"Slick."

"Oh, yes! You're one of the Slicks, you told me. Isn't Souri a singular name for a girl?"

"Well, dad, he kem from Missouri. So that's what he named me."

"Have you a mother?"

"Yas."

"Brothers and sisters?"

"Henry and Jakey."

"How old are they?"

"Henry, he's about twenty-two. He's in Jim Brown's company o' east Tennessee cavalry."

"What? Union cavalry?"

"Yas."

"You mean regiment, not company. I know Brown well. How old is your other brother?"

"Jakey, he's thirteen."

"At home?"

"Yas."

"What are you going to do with me when you get me to your home?"

"Take y' to the barn, I reckon."

"Why not to the house. Aren't your folks all right? I thought you said they were Union."

"Oh, they're all Union. But mebbe they might suspect at the tavern (sneak) I'm gone 'bout seven goodby and knowen I'm Union that I've put y' up to some'n or tuk y' hum."

"Souri," said Mark meditatively, "do you know that since I met you I have been thinking that you're nobody's fool."

The girl laughed, or rather chuckled. She enjoyed the compliment and was too unsophisticated to pretend that she did not.

They soon struck a dirt road leading directly south, which they followed till they came to the Sequatchie river, striking a ford at the same time. Souri led the way into the ford, Mark following. Her pony was used to such crossings, this one in particular, while Mark's horse preferred to feed his way slowly; consequently Souri reached the opposite bank before Mark had got half way over.

would have seen anxiety depicted on every feature of her face.

"Keep up the stream!" she called, pointing at the same time.

He turned his horse's head as she directed, but soon lowering his eyes to the water began to go down stream again.

"Look at me," she called; "don't look at the water. Its ripples makes it seem as if y' war gone straight when y' goen crooked. That's a ledge o' rocks below that and deep water beyond."

Mark fixed his eyes on his guide, and turning his horse's head toward her urged her forward. She picked her way slowly, as if conscious of danger, and at last coming to the brink stepped quickly out of the water and shook herself.

"What makes you trouble me?" he asked of Souri.

"I ain't," she said, coloring.

"Is that a dangerous ford?"

"If y'd a-tumbled often the ledge y'd 'a' drowned."

"I've done some scouting before this, but I see now that I haven't learned to cross a current till today. Next time I'll look out for something on shore to steer by."

Another ten minutes brought them home. Souri led the way to a rickety barn, where both horses were stabled. She left Mark in the barn while she went into the house to inform the inmates of his presence.

Presently she came out.

"And 'low's y' brought come in fur a spell 'bout much rest. They won't know o' y' bein' here yet awhile. Leastways that's no hurry. But dad reckons y' might sleep in the barn with one eye open."

"I shall not sleep anywhere tonight. I must go on. But I'll go in with you for awhile."

A man met them at the door with white, shaggy hair and a stubble beard. He looked sixty, though he was ten or fifteen years younger. His trousers were drawn nearly up to his armpits, a double breasted waistcoat served in lieu of a coat.

"Them blue clothes looks kinder peart to me uns down hyar ez ain't seen nothin but gray," said the man. "I 'lowed when you uns went up ter Chattanooga last June and shed them blue pants at the town y' was goen to hold onto those hyar pants."

"Perhaps it was a mistake," said Mark, "but I never criticize the acts of my superiors."

"Come into the house."

The dwelling was composed of two square log houses, some ten feet apart, under one roof, with a floor between the two. The man led Mark into one of these parts or houses. The articles in it that struck the soldier's eye were a very high bedstead, lighted with a very high bedstead, a chest of drawers, and a clock on the mantle that ticked loud enough to be heard out in the barn. There were some pieces of rag carpet on the floor, two or three hard seated chairs and a rocker.

"What y' got fur supper?" the old man asked as his wife entered.

"I don't want any supper," said the soldier. "I only ate an hour or two ago."

The woman, who was bent down through some nervous disease, went to the chest of drawers, took therefrom a cob pipe and some tobacco and began to smoke.

"Much shaken among the sojers, stranger?" she asked.

"At the beginning of a fight there's a good deal," replied Mark, "but after they're once in they get on without much trouble."

"Don't mean that kind of shaken—ager."

"Oh, ague. No, I don't think there's much ague."

"There's always more or less camp fever. It seems as if every man who campaigns in this country must have a dose of typhoid to get acclimated."

"That's a powerful lot o' fevers 'bout hyar. That's the typhoid, the broken bone, the intermission and the remission, and once on awhile we get yellow jack when it comes up the Mississippi from Orleans."

"That's a good deal of fever," replied Mark; "but, to come down to business, I want to say a few words to you people. You're sure you're Union?"

"Sure," said the old man.

"Got a young un in Jim Brown's company of east Tennesseeans," said the old woman. "I hearn th' all had the measles in th' spring. Henry had it."

"Yas, that regiment was nearly all down at one time. Now, I'm going on a very dangerous mission. May I rely on—who are you?"

A boy about thirteen years of age had come into the room, and squaring himself before Mark began to stare at him.

"Jakey," replied the intruder, "I have something of importance to say to your father and mother." Then to the parents, "Won't you please send him out?"

"Just a y' like, stranger," answered the father, "but mebbe Jakey might show y' the way or some'n. He's party peart."

Jakey's appearance did not bear witness to the encomium.

"Well, let him stay. I would like to rely on this house as a place of refuge in case I have to get back here rapidly. I want you to take care of my horse, and if I never come you can keep her. If I do come I'll pay you more liberally for horse fodder than you ever were paid before."

"Y' talk pretty rich for a common sojer."

"Don't fear for that. I have money," and Mark showed a roll of bills that astonished his host.

"Do you agree?"

"Sure, but the money don't make no differ. I'm a Union man to the backbone."

"Have you any citizen's clothes?"

"That's Henry's store clothes ez he left when he went to Jim th' army."

"Will they fit me?"

"Reckon so. Henry's 'bout your size."

Black took the soldier into the twin log cabin and there gave him a suit of clothes which were intended for best wear, but they had evidently been so intended for years, with frequent deviations from the intention. Mark took off his uniform, which, with his rifle and pistol and other accoutrements, he put under the bed. Then he drew off his boots (so loose that he could easily remove them without unbuckling his spurs) and put on a pair of shoes. A felt hat completed his attire.

"La, snakes!" said Souri, raising her hands as she met him passing between the cabins, thus arranged for secret service.

As Mark entered the room where he had left Mrs. Slick and Jakey their eyes stood out wondering. Mr. Slick followed Mark into the room.

"Now how about the road?" asked Mark.

"What?"

"To Chattanooga."

"Well, y' might go right up the road in front 'n the house fur 'bout a mile. Then y'll come ter a road leaden sort o' southeast like. Ez y' go down this ar road I'll take y' ter th' Chattanooga pike. Jakey, you might go along 'n show 'n th' way."

"Do you know the road your father speaks of, leading to the Chattanooga pike?" asked Mark of the boy.

"Does I know, Souri?"

"None o' them sideways talken, Jake. Answer straight," said Mr. Slick severely.

"Reckon I does. I knows all th' roads 'bout hyar."

Mark looked at the boy and thought a few moments without speaking. He was a stupid looking child, but Mark thought that if he could get him to go with him it might avert suspicion.

"Jakey," he asked, "how would you like to go with me on a trip?"

"How would I like to shoot squirrels?"

"You, Jakey! Didn't I tell y' t' answer straight?" from the father.

"Yas, I'd like to go."

"I've a mind to take you, if your father will let you go," said Mark meditatively.

"Many fevers 'bout Chattanooga?" asked the mother, taking the pipe out of her mouth and casting an anxious glance at her son.

"What y' goin ter do with him?" asked Slick.

"I only want him for a companion—to divert suspicion—and well, I can't tell exactly what—for an emergency, perhaps."

"What's a 'emergency?' asked Jakey. "Well, if I should learn something of importance I might want to send you back with the news, or if I should be caught in a—in a—"

"Tree, like a coon, with a gun or a dog below," supplied Jakey.

"That's it exactly. I might want to send word about that."

"I'm afraid he's too little ter be of any use that a-way," said his father.

"Oh, Jakey can't go. He's got ter stay right hyar 'n do hosen," chimed his mother.

"What do you say, Jakey? Do you want to go?" asked Mark.

"Would I?"

"You, Jakey," again shouted his father.

"Course I want ter go."

"I'll tell you what I'll do. If you will let him go I'll bring him or send him back safely and leave a twenty dollar greenback here with you for him on his return."

"Souri! Souri!" called Slick.

Souri came in so quickly as to argue that she had not been out of hearing of all that had passed.

"Snack for these two uns," said her father.

Souri departed, and presently returned with a bundle containing cold eatables.

"Now, Jakey," said his father as they all stood at the front gate before the departure of the two travelers, "remember yer a Unioner 'n treat the stranger fair."

"Oh, I ain't no slouch, 'f I am little," replied the boy, with a shrug and a scowl, indicating that he regarded the injunction entirely uncalled for.

"N, Jakey," called his mother, "don't yer go 'n sleep out nights 'n git th' ager."

"Never yer mind, maw. I ain't goen ter git no ager."

They passed out of the clearing, and were about entering the wood into

"GOODBY, MY LITTLE GIRL," SAID MARK, which the road took them when they heard a step behind them. Turning, there was Souri.

"How long d' y' 'low y' might be gone down that?" she asked.

Mark looked into her face, and she lowered her eyes.

"Why do you want to know, Souri?"

"Want, maw, she'll worrit 'bout Jakey."

"I can't tell you."

"How fur y' goen?"

"To Chattanooga. Perhaps farther, but not likely."

Where the Clove Tree Thrives. There is no place in the world where the clove tree thrives as well as in the islands of Zanzibar and Pemba. It is the principal product of the islands, and, together with copra and the ivory brought from the mainland, cloves form the principal item of export.
